- CEVAPLAR

1-) How did the sinful group respond to the signs pointing to Allah's oneness when they reached the age of responsibility?

They answered those signs with disbelief instead of faith.

2-) Name two wrong responses this group showed toward Allah and His gifts.

They responded with unbelief toward the signs of divine unity and with ingratitude toward blessings.

3-) What was wrong with their view of the rest of creation?

They treated creatures as if they had no worth and insulted them.

4-) Why is their crime called "boundless" in meaning?

Because their denial reached across all the manifestations of the divine names rather than being a small isolated wrong.

5-) What kind of life-goal is criticized by the speaker's questions to the self?

A life-goal centered only on comfort, social living, and physical desire.

6-) Why does the passage refer to delicate senses and carefully ordered bodily systems?

To emphasize that human beings were created with higher aims than animal-like pleasure.

7-) What is the first main aim of these human abilities?

It is to recognize the many blessings of the True Bestower and to thank and worship Him.

8-) According to the passage, what makes someone a true human being?

Fulfilling these two purposes and becoming perfected through them.

9-) After experiencing these manifestations, what is a person expected to do?

Recognize them and reach belief.

10-) What overall lesson does the passage teach about the value of human faculties?

They are noble trusts meant for gratitude, worship, recognition, and belief, not for chasing temporary cravings.

- CEVAPLAR

1-) At what stage of life does the passage say the wicked group entered the world's test in a morally responsible way?

It says this happened when they reached the age of discretion.

2-) How did they respond to blessings, and what does that show?

They responded with ingratitude, showing a failure to appreciate the Giver.

3-) How did their disbelief affect the way they looked at created things?

It led them to belittle and insult creation.

4-) What reason is given for why human life and abilities cannot be treated carelessly?

Because they were granted for important duties, not for empty use.

5-) What mistaken belief about human purpose is openly challenged?

The belief that a person's duty is just to enjoy worldly life and satisfy bodily appetites.

6-) Which parts of the human being are mentioned to show that people were made for more than physical pleasure?

The passage mentions subtle senses, sensitive faculties and organs, orderly limbs and systems, and curious feelings and senses.

7-) What role do human faculties play in reaching belief?

They help a person experience and recognize the manifestations of the divine names, which leads to faith.

8-) In the second main aim, what should a person come to know through his or her faculties?

The manifestations of the sacred divine names shown in the world.

9-) How are experience and belief connected in the second purpose?

Experience is meant to lead to recognition, and recognition is meant to lead to faith.

10-) If someone uses human abilities only for lower desires, how would that compare with the model of humanity in this passage?

That person would be misusing abilities meant for a far higher spiritual purpose and would fall short of true human development.

They rejected them instead of accepting them.

2-) What second failure is mentioned in relation to Allah's favors?

They met His gifts with thanklessness.

3-) How did their denial of the divine names affect the seriousness of their sin?

It made their offense immense and made them liable to unending punishment.

4-) What trust from Allah did they fail to use correctly?

They failed to use the capital of life and their human faculties for their true duties.

5-) What mistaken idea about life is challenged in the passage?

The idea that life is only for comfort, worldly living, and satisfying bodily desires.

6-) What is the second of the two main goals?

To let a person know the different manifestations of the divine names through experience and then believe in them.

7-) In the first main aim, what should a person first recognize before giving thanks?

The many kinds of blessings given by the True Bestower.

8-) How are worship and gratitude connected in the first purpose?

Awareness of blessings should lead to thankfulness, and thankfulness should lead to worship.

9-) According to the final line, what is the result of fulfilling both aims?

A person matures and becomes a genuine human being.
