CEVAP ANAHTARI

11sinif short-words-p16-sixth-word-the-two-mens-responses-and-outcomes -

Set 1 - CEVAPLAR

1-) What situation did the king create for the two men at the beginning of the passage?

He placed each of them in charge of an estate with equipment, animals, and tools.

2-) Why is the king's request reasonable based on the story?

The property belongs to him originally, and he offers to protect and reward the men for giving it back.

3-) What was the king trying to prevent by asking for the property back?

He wanted to keep it from being wasted or destroyed without benefit.

4-) Besides returning it, what else did the king promise to give for the property?

He promised a very great payment for it.

5-) How does the king strengthen his argument by discussing both profit and loss?

He shows that acceptance leads to multiple benefits while refusal leads to multiple harms.

6-) Why would refusal lead to both hardship and punishment?

The men would struggle to guard what they could not keep and also be guilty of betraying what was entrusted to them.

7-) What new status would a man receive if he accepted the king's offer?

He would serve as the king's soldier in an honorable and free position instead of a low and restricted one.

8-) Why is gratitude linked with wisdom in the first man?

His thankfulness shows he recognizes both the king's generosity and his own need.

9-) How are the outcomes of the two men opposite to one another?

One gains rank, nearness, and joy, while the other loses status, possessions, and peace.

10-) What was the result for the first man after some time passed?

He rose to a very high rank, gained the king's favor, and lived in happiness.

Set 2 - CEVAPLAR

1-) Who are the main figures in the comparison found in this passage?

A king, his messenger, and two men entrusted with estates.

2-) What larger condition threatened everything in the story?

A violent and unstable age in which possessions could not remain secure.

3-) What tone does the king use in his message?

He speaks with mercy, concern, and generosity.

4-) How does the king try to persuade the men logically?

He explains both the benefits of accepting and the harms of refusing.

5-) How did the king address the men's inability to carry out expensive tasks?

He said he would provide the needed costs and equipment himself.

6-) Why would refusing the offer be foolish even from a worldly point of view?

The property was already at risk, and refusal would only add burden without securing it.

7-) Why is becoming the king's soldier better than remaining a common captive or irregular fighter?

It brings dignity, freedom, and closeness to royal service.

8-) Which of the two men responds with humility?

The one who gladly accepts and gives thanks.

9-) What does the story suggest about temporary enjoyment compared with lasting reward?

Chasing short pleasure can make a person miss far greater and longer-lasting good.

10-) What was the final social result of each man's decision?

People admired the first man and pitied the second.

Set 3 - CEVAPLAR

1-) What did each of the two men receive from the king?

Each one was given charge over an estate filled with what was needed for work and defense.

2-) How did the king communicate his offer to the two men?

He sent a respected representative with a merciful message.

3-) What does the king promise to do with the trust while the men wait for the end of the conflict?

He promises to preserve it, improve it, and let them keep its returns.

4-) What does the king's offer reveal about the relationship between ownership and trust?

Real ownership remains with the king, while the men only hold the property temporarily.

5-) Why did the king say he should take responsibility for expenses and supplies?

The two men were too poor and unable to cover the cost of such major work themselves.

6-) How does the first man understand the offer differently from the second?

He sees it as a blessing, while the second sees it as a threat to his personal pleasure.

7-) What kind of reasoning does the second man use in refusing it?

He follows desire and pride rather than truth and consequences.

8-) What character traits are given for the man who refused?

He was proud, self-centered, wasteful, and controlled by his lower desires.

9-) What does the second man lose besides material things?

He loses happiness, dignity, and peace.

10-) What does the second man's torment show about the cost of rejecting mercy?

Refusing a generous offer can turn opportunity into punishment.

Set 4 - CEVAPLAR

1-) What important responsibility did the two men share at the start of the story?

Both were responsible for managing property placed in their care by the king.

2-) Why is that detail important for understanding the king's request?

It shows the king was asking for something that already truly belonged to him.

3-) What was the main action the king requested from the two men?

He asked them to transfer the trust back to him.

4-) What two things did the king promise concerning labor and reward?

He would direct the work and also multiply the return from it.

5-) What does the king's willingness to cover expenses show about his generosity?

It shows he gives help in addition to reward, not just commands.

6-) What warning did the king give about trying to hold the property on their own?

They would fail to keep it and end up losing both it and the offered reward.

7-) What does the first man's thankful response reveal about his character?

He is humble, perceptive, and appreciative.

8-) What inner weakness kept the second man from making the wise choice?

His arrogance and selfish desire for temporary pleasure blinded him.

9-) What mistaken view of time shapes the second man's refusal?

He behaves as though his stay and possessions are permanent.

10-) What emotional reaction do people have toward the second man at the end?

They feel pity for him, though they also recognize that he brought it on himself.

Set 5 - CEVAPLAR

1-) What is the basic conflict in this passage?

The two men must choose whether to surrender a temporary trust to the king or cling to it for themselves.

2-) Why did the king send a lieutenant instead of coming personally in the story?

The lieutenant served as the royal messenger delivering the king's order and mercy.

3-) What promise did the king make about the property after the time of war ended?

He promised to return it in a better state than before.

4-) Why are the men not in a good position to insist on independence?

They are poor and unable to carry the expenses of the work.

5-) What is the meaning of the king saying the use of the tools would increase greatly in value?

Their ordinary work would gain much greater worth when tied to the king's service.

6-) What losses did the king warn about if they refused?

They would lose the property, miss the high payment, see valuable things become useless, carry the burden of managing them, and face punishment for breaking trust.

7-) What phrase in meaning best describes the second man's outlook on life?

He lives as if the world and his enjoyment will never end.

8-) What image in the passage shows the second man was detached from reality?

He acted like he would remain forever in a place clearly threatened by disaster.

9-) How did the second man answer the king's offer?

He rejected it and chose his own enjoyment over obedience.

10-) What does the story imply about responsibility toward what is placed in our care?

We must treat it as a trust and respond rightly to the one who gave it.

11sinif short-words-p16-sixth-word-the-two-mens-responses-and-outcomes -

Set 6 - CEVAPLAR

1-) At the opening of the passage, what did the king place under the care of each man?

A full estate with the means needed for work and protection.

2-) Why did the dangerous age make the king's offer urgent?

Delay could mean the estates would be ruined before any good came from them.

3-) In what way was the king's message compassionate?

He offered protection, reward, and support instead of simply taking back what was his.

4-) What immediate financial benefit did the king also promise?

A rich payment and increased return from the tools and work.

5-) How does the king's proposal combine kindness with authority?

He offers help and reward, yet also warns of consequences for disobedience.

6-) What does the king mean by saying the tools would be used in his name?

Their work would become part of the king's service rather than private use.

7-) What social and political promotion comes with acceptance?

The man becomes an honored servant of the king instead of remaining low-ranking.

8-) Why is the second man's attachment to enjoyment presented negatively?

It leads him to ignore truth, responsibility, and his own future.

9-) Why is the second man's choice unrealistic?

He behaves as though worldly things will last forever even though the passage says they do not.

10-) What happened to the second man after his rejection?

He sank into misery, lost what he had, and suffered punishment.
