5sinif short-words-p56-twenty-first-word-first-station-third-warning-impatience-and-three-kinds-of-patience - Set 1 - CEVAPLAR

1-) In the Third Warning, what mistake does the nafs make about time and worship?

It mixes up the past, present, and future, and becomes upset by thinking about pains and duties that should not all be carried at once.

2-) What two time periods does the nafs wrongly bring into the present?

The past and the future.

3-) What happened because the center was left weak?

The enemy saw the opening, attacked the middle, and defeated him.

4-) Why is this kind of impatience not sensible?

Because a person is suffering from things that are either over already or have not happened yet.

5-) Why is it foolish to become upset now about future worship or future disasters?

Those days have not come yet, so worrying about them now is like suffering before there is any real need.

6-) What remains after yesterday's pain is gone?

The good result, such as blessing and reward, remains.

7-) What change can happen when a person thinks this way?

Sad, heavy feelings can turn into cheerful effort.

8-) What is the first type of patience listed?

Patience in worship.

9-) What is the main lesson of the Third Warning?

Do not waste strength on the past and future; use patience wisely and do today's worship with courage and hope.

The impatient self, or nafs.

2-) How does wrong thinking about the past hurt a person?

It makes the person feel weighed down by pains that have already ended.

3-) How does the military example help explain the nafs's mistake?

It shows how strength is scattered in the wrong places instead of being kept where it is needed now.

4-) Why was the commander's plan foolish?

He used his forces where they were not needed and left the most important place undefended.

5-) How does the passage describe worrying today about tomorrow's pain?

It describes it as senseless and foolish.

6-) What should a person feel when thinking of continuing worship?

Fresh eagerness and serious effort.

7-) How many forms of patience does the passage mention?

Three.

8-) How is that hour of worship described?

It is described as beautiful, uplifting, and very rewarding, with only a little hardship.

9-) What does the passage say will happen if patience is not wasted?

It will be enough, by Allah's permission, to endure every hardship and trouble.

1-) What is the central advice given to the nafs in this passage?

Be patient, focus on the present, and do not let past pain or future fear stop worship.

2-) What does the passage say about being upset by both old troubles and future duties at the same time?

It says this is not wise.

3-) In the example, why was sending soldiers to the left side also unnecessary?

Because there was no enemy there at all.

4-) What happened when the enemy noticed the center had no strength?

They attacked there and won.

5-) How are old pains and struggles described after they pass?

They can become mercy, blessings, and reward.

6-) What lesson about the future is given in the passage?

Since it has not come yet, a person should not suffer from it ahead of time.

7-) How does the passage describe the act of worship done today?

It is shown as pleasant, honorable, and highly rewarded.

8-) How does the passage describe today's act of worship?

As a pleasant and noble service with great reward and small burden.
