He has good character, thinks positively, and follows the order he recognizes.

2-) Why does the second brother move with peace and security?

He accepts the road's order instead of resisting it.

3-) What result comes from this approach in the garden?

He benefits from the good things, rests well, and continues his journey in a better state.

4-) What does the lion's attack show about the journey?

It shows that even the better brother still faces serious trials.

5-) What threatening things does he see while suspended there?

He sees two creatures eating the roots, the lion above, and the dragon below.

6-) What does he mean by saying the events are under orders?

He means they are controlled by an unseen authority.

7-) What grows out of that love?

A desire arises to solve the mystery and develop qualities that would please its owner.

8-) How does he interpret the many fruits on one tree?

He sees them as samples or signs pointing to larger provisions set out by the hidden ruler.

9-) In his prayer, how does he describe his relationship to the ruler of that place?

He presents himself as a servant seeking refuge, wanting to please the ruler, and searching for him.

10-) What visible changes happen after the prayer?

The well opens into a beautiful garden, and the frightening creatures become helpful servants.

lisans short-words-p29-eighth-word-the-fortunate- brothers-journey-and-the-talismans-opening - Set 2 - CEVAPLAR

1-) How is the second brother described at the opening of the passage?
He is presented as fortunate, intelligent, and morally sound.

2-) What is the significance of the phrase that everything felt familiar to him?

It shows he did not experience the world as hostile and alien.

3-) What does this reveal about his way of thinking?

He is selective in a wise way and does not let the bad cancel out the good.

4-) What does the lion represent inside the immediate story world before later interpretation?

It is a sudden, terrifying threat that tests his reaction.

5-) What does this assumption suggest about his worldview?

He believes events can have meaning, purpose, and authority behind them.

6-) What does he infer from the ordered strangeness of the situation?

He infers that a hidden sovereign is directing everything.

7-) Why does curiosity matter in this passage?

It becomes the doorway to seeking understanding rather than sinking into despair.

8-) What does the impossible fruit-bearing tree teach him about appearances?

It teaches him that unusual appearances may carry signs of a deeper reality.

9-) What are the main elements of his supplication?

He seeks protection, declares service, expresses the wish to please, and says he is looking for the ruler.

10-) How does the dragon change, and what does that do to the scene?

Its threatening mouth becomes a doorway, turning terror into welcome.

lisans short-words-p29-eighth-word-the-fortunate- brothers-journey-and-the-talismans-opening - Set 3 - CEVAPLAR

1-) What inner quality most shapes the fortunate brother's experience throughout the passage?

His sound moral state shapes the way he interprets everything.

2-) What does the passage suggest about the power of imagination and thought?

They strongly shape whether a person experiences life as peaceful or miserable.

3-) What does his behavior in the garden show about emotional discipline?

It shows he does not let one unpleasant part control his whole response.

4-) What repeated danger proves that righteousness does not remove all tests?

He still has to face the lion and the terrifying well.

5-) After entering the well, what evidence does he gather that the situation has meaning?

He sees a structured set of interconnected events and concludes they point to command and purpose.

6-) What does he conclude about being alone?

He concludes that he is not abandoned because an unseen ruler is aware of him.

7-) Why is love for the hidden ruler a significant turning point?

It shifts him from mere self-protection to a sincere desire for nearness and approval.

8-) Why is his study of the tree an important act of comprehension?

It shows he is reading signs carefully instead of accepting appearances at face value.

9-) What does he do instead of trying to solve everything by himself?

He turns in humble prayer and asks for help.

10-) What dramatic transformation follows his turning toward the ruler?

The well opens into a serene garden, and the creatures that seemed deadly become attendants.

lisans short-words-p29-eighth-word-the-fortunate- brothers-journey-and-the-talismans-opening - Set 4 - CEVAPLAR

1-) What connection does the passage make between fine morals and thought patterns?

Good character gives rise to healthy thoughts.

2-) How did his response to the garden differ from his brother's response?

He focused on what was beneficial and restful, while his brother fixated on what was foul and left upset.

3-) How does the second brother avoid that mistake?

He deliberately looks to the wholesome side and takes benefit from it.

4-) What does this thought give him in the middle of danger?

It gives him comfort and reduces his panic.

5-) What details in the well make the scene seem almost impossible?

There are root-eating creatures, a predator above, a dragon below, and an extraordinary tree bearing many kinds of fruit.

6-) According to his reflection, what might the hidden ruler be doing with him?

The ruler may be watching him, testing him, guiding him somewhere, and calling him toward a purpose.

7-) After love appears, what further desire follows?

He wants to uncover the mystery and become the kind of person pleasing to its owner.

8-) Why does his fear disappear when he understands the tree this way?

The tree becomes evidence of wise planning and generous intention rather than random danger.

9-) What does his prayer reveal about humility?

He admits need, seeks refuge, and identifies himself as a servant.

10-) What lesson is introduced in the closing address to the nafs and the imaginary friend?

The lesson is that good brings forth good outcomes, while evil leads to harmful outcomes.

lisans short-words-p29-eighth-word-the-fortunate- brothers-journey-and-the-talismans-opening - Set 5 - CEVAPLAR

1-) In the target passage, what makes the second brother “fortunate”?
His intelligence is joined with good morals and sound judgment.

2-) What does the garden symbolize within the scene itself before any later explanation?

It is a place containing both attractive things and ugly, decaying things side by side.

3-) How does the second brother’s response to the garden differ in outcome from his brother’s?

He gains refreshment and rest, while the other lost peace and moved on disturbed.

4-) If the outward circumstances are similar, what produces the different inner experiences?

Their different moral and mental responses create the difference.

5-) What features of the well scene mirror his brother’s experience?

The same deep well, the hanging tree, the two gnawing animals, the lion above, and the dragon below.

6-) What four ideas does he reach about the hidden ruler?

The ruler sees him, tests him, directs him somewhere, and calls him for a purpose.

7-) What chain of inner growth begins with curiosity?

Curiosity leads to seeking knowledge, then to love, then to longing to solve the mystery, and then to moral self-improvement.

8-) How does he reason that the tree is like a display?

He concludes that samples must have been attached to point toward greater provisions prepared elsewhere.

9-) What three things does he express directly in his supplication?

Need for protection, commitment to service, and desire to please and find the ruler.

10-) What final transformation happens to the lion and what is its effect?

It becomes gentle and useful, showing that danger can turn into help under rightful understanding.

lisans short-words-p29-eighth-word-the-fortunate- brothers-journey-and-the-talismans-opening - Set 6 - CEVAPLAR

1-) What is the first major difference between the fortunate brother and the other brother in this passage?

The fortunate brother is guided by intelligence and good character instead of heedlessness and corruption.

2-) What contrast appears in the garden itself?

The garden contains beauty and nourishment alongside neglect and decay.

3-) What wise habit does he practice in the garden?

He gives attention to what is good and useful and does not become trapped by what is filthy.

4-) How is his response to danger realistic rather than naive?

He still feels fear and runs, but he does not surrender to hopelessness.

5-) What details in the well increase the sense of danger?

The roots are being cut through, a lion waits above, a dragon threatens below, and the scene is filled with strangeness.

6-) How does fear change once he interprets it within a meaningful framework?

It becomes lighter and is joined by interest and even hope.

7-) What gives birth to love in his heart?

His desire to know the one behind the mystery leads to love.

8-) Why does he reject the idea that the tree is ordinary?

Because one tree bearing the produce of countless trees cannot be explained as normal.

9-) What does he ask for before deliverance comes?

He asks to be shown the key to understanding the mystery.

10-) How do the changed forms of the dragon and lion support the main message of the passage?

They show that things that seem purely harmful can become means of mercy for someone who responds rightly.
